MR. MORLEY'S REMEDY.

We are sincerely sorry for Mr. John Morley. A better meaning man never filled the difficult post of Irish Secretary, which Mr. Morley, as we can well believe, only accepted with extreme reluctance tunder the strongest pressure. Mr. Balfour's customary skill in hitting the nail fairly on the head was excellently to make the Chief Secretary on the head was excellently he had been all fairly on the head was excellently on the head was excellently the nail fairly on the head was excellently was excellently on the head was excellently he have illustrated in the speech he delivered on we have noted by the criticism to which military and naval expenditure is subject to the thouse of Commons, Mr. Balfour pointed out the temptation which military and naval expenditure is subject to the country to reduce the estimates for the Army and Navy. "Every Ministry." he said, "how it cannot do a more unpopular the glade of the sum total of their action when the subject of national defence to some other administration." The folly of yielding to that temptation cannot be too earnestly impressed upon the working classes. National defence means the defence of our commercial supremacy, and the price of a royal commission. No wonder that Mr. Morley's letter has not been received with enthusiastic appro Morley. A better meaning man never filled the difficult post of Irish Secretary, which Mr. Morley, as we can well believe, only accepted with extreme reductance declare their conviction that the main object of the Government is to gain time rather than to do anything for the tenants, and they have written to Mr. Morley to protest against the commission.

As a matter of fact, the number of evicted tenants is about 6,000, and it is not improbable that there will be a good many more before long. Obviously, then, the inquiry into the cases of these persons will take a very long time, as, indeed, all inquiries by royal commission invariably and necessarily must do. Not content with protesting against the appointment of the cases of the present with protesting against the appointment with protesting against the appointment of the cases of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the content of the present year came to £163, the present year c

They have been deploring the hard case of the Irish evicted tenants so long that they ought to be positively grateful for this unique opportunity. If, however, they neglect to avail themselves of it—which is

BOGUS COMPANIES.

The warning which the public have recently received through the failure of certain banks and building societies is appropriately followed by the revelations in what has been generally called the literary frauds case. The offence of Morgan, Tomkins, Sir Gilbert Campbell, and their fellow-oriminals, was not, however, so much that of inducing credulous persons to part with their capital in the hope of obtaining exorbitantly high interest. It was principally upon the vanity of their dupes or upon their legitimate, but ignorant, desire to obtain distinction in the world of literature and art that these rogues traded. Their proceedings may, nevertheless, be taken as the text for a serious warning against putting faith in the specious promises of the promoters of bogue companies of all kinds. Whether a man desires to invest his savings, to publish a book, to enhibit a picture, or what not, there is one standing rule which ought to guide his action. That is, never to part with his money until he has obtained advice from some competent professional man, upon whose integrity he can rely, as to the character of the person or the institution in whom or in which he proposes to confide. Our readers may be certain of this—it is the teaching of common sense and common observation—that in every sphere of action in which there is money to be made there will be two classes of persons actively employed—those, namely, who have genuine proposals to offer; and those, on the other hand, who are living by their wits at the expense of the eredulous public. We would also draw special attention to the case of Sir Gilbert. Campbell as an instance of the way in which men with honourable names occasionally sink so low as to lend them to the nemark of Sir Forrest Fulton, in addressing the principal offender in this case, that "one of the greatest dangers of the present time is the floating of these bogue companies." That class of crime has, unfortunately, increased

MURDER NEAR BRISTOL.

Albert Manning, a mason's labouror, was arrested on Wednesday by the Gloucester shire police at Kingswood, near Bristol, on a charge of wilfelly murdering Jane Flow, a married woman, with whom he had been quarrelling in consequence of jealoust towards another man whom he had seen with her. She was standing at the door of a shop where she lived when the prisoner came up with a revolver and fired at her. The first shot missed her, and alie ran into the shop. The prisoner then fired through the window, and shot her in the breast. She died immediately, He ran upstairs and tried to shoot bimself, but the police quickly followed and arrested him after some resistance. When arrested the prisoner the prisoner readmitted to the police that he bought the revolver with the intention of shooting a man of whom he was jealous, but seeing the deceased he fired at her. The woman was about $7 years of age, and the prisoner is about the same age.
